

THE GRADUATE

Watching someone become.

Some milestones arrive as more than news. They reveal how far someone has traveled—and how fully she has grown into her own life.

Years ago, Diana was my roommate: restless, ambitious, and determined to find what came next. I always rooted for her. Now, seeing her in a graduation cap, I see more than a degree. I see persistence, possibility, and a young woman becoming exactly who she chose to be.

A photograph captures the moment. A few honest words preserve what it means.

“A milestone worth celebrating. A journey worth preserving.”

With love and pride,
Uncle Pat
